Making Canvas Class Recordings Available to Specific People

If you're recording class to canvas but you only want specific people to view those videos, follow these steps. You'll need to repeat Step 3 on for each week's class:

- If you don't already see "Class Recordings" on the left-side navigation bar, you'll have to enable it by going to your Canvas Course > Settings > Navigation > Right click on "Class Recordings" at the bottom and "Enable" > Then Save

> Settings

- Now enabled, go to "Class Recordings" in Canvas > (folder) Settings in the top right > Settings > Change "Availability" to "When approved by publisher."
 1. You will now get an email whenever your class recording has posted, so you can edit access and approve it for viewing

Availability

Folders can be made available after a start date and before an end date. The avt for a single session may override the availability for its parent folder.

To prevent new sessions from being published to viewers before approval, set fol availability to "never". Sessions can then be made available by editing them or by availability for each individual session.

Stop Inheriting

- Now that you've clicked "Stop Inheriting" you can change access for that folder. Make sure to delete the "Class Name" - Viewer ONLY. If you delete Creator you will lose access yourself! Then add the names/pennkey of the students who should have access to view and make sure they're labeled as Viewer and not Creator.

- You and your specific students now have access to the Folder's contents! So let's move the video into that folder. Click on "Class Recordings" on the Navigation bar on the left again to go to the top most folder and find your recordings that've posted automatically.

- Click the Settings gear on the Video you want to move
